Inventory for FOIA Request 2017-0494-F

White House Office of Records Management (WHORM) records that reference Steve Jobs

Extent

11 folders, approximately 39 pages

Access

Collection is open to all researchers. Access to Clinton Presidential Records is governed by the Presidential Records Act (PRA) (44 U.S.C. Chapter 22, as amended) and the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) (5 U.S.C. 552, as amended) and therefore records may be restricted in whole or in part in accordance with legal exemptions.

Copyright

Documents in this collection that were prepared by officials of the United States government as part of their official duties are in the public domain. Researchers are advised to consult the copyright law of the United States (17 U.S.C. Chapter 1) which governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Provenance

Official records of William Jefferson Clinton's presidency are housed at the Clinton Presidential Library and administered by the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) under the provisions of the Presidential Records Act (PRA).

Processed by

Staff Archivist, 2017. Previously restricted materials are added as they are released.

Scope and Content

The materials in FOIA 2017-0494-F are a selective body of documents responsive to the topic of the FOIA. Researchers should consult the archivist about related material.

Steve Jobs was an American entrepreneur, businessman, inventor, and industrial designer. He and his original partner Steve Wozniak are widely recognized as two of the most important pioneers of the microcomputer revolution of the 1970s and 1980s.

Mr. Jobs served as the Chairman, and Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of Apple Inc. from 1976 -1985 and again from 1997 to 2011. He was also CEO and majority shareholder of the motion picture production company Pixar, and a member of The Walt Disney Company's board of directors following its acquisition of Pixar in 2005. He was the owner of more than 300 United States patents and played a key role in the creation of the Apple II, Macintosh, iMac, MacBook, iPod, iTunes, the iPhone, and the iPad.

Records that are responsive to this FOIA include various correspondence between the President and Mr. Jobs including Jobs' unsolicited recommendations for a new Surgeon-General and Secretary of Defense, Christmas greetings, and an invitation to a special screening of the Pixar film "A Bug's Life". This collection also includes a copy of a New York Times crossword puzzle in which Mr. Jobs is the answer to one of the clues, and a copy of a thank you note from the President to Mr. Jobs for his charitable donation of computer terminals to the people of Kosovo.

System of Arrangement

Records that are responsive to this FOIA request were found in these collection areas—Clinton Presidential Records: White House Office of Records Management (WHORM); and Clinton Presidential Records: WHORM (OP).

The White House Office of Records Management (WHORM) contains a variety of series created to organize and track documents and correspondence. The WHORM Subject file was compiled by the White House Office of Records Management and is a series of categories designated by a letter/number combination. In addition, there are WHORM (OP) series.

FOIA 2017-0494-F includes WHORM records from these subject codes:

[BE003]	[Business – Economics; Industry]
[FG022-03]	[Department of Health & Human Services; Public Health Service (NIH)]
[GI001]	[Gifts from the President]

Dear Steve:

Thanks for your letter of November 19. I'm grateful for your recommendations, and, as you well know, I have great respect for Dean Ornish. Although I've already announced Senator Cohen as my choice for Secretary of Defense, I appreciate your comments about Andy Grove. I've made Bob Nash aware of your suggestions.

Hope you and your family have a wonderful holiday season.

Sincerely,

Bill Clinton

Mr. President:

Congratulations on your victory. Thank you for letting us play a small part in it; we will remember it always. I wanted to make two crazy suggestions for your consideration in your search to replace two of your departing team members:

Dean Ornish for Surgeon General

Yes, Dean has inhaled (and more), which will create some problems. He would, however, be supported by many people who's lives he has dramatically improved and in some cases saved. This group of supporters includes many corporate executives who have been spared major surgery. Dean is at the forefront of answering many of the basic questions concerning "How does diet affect health?", and these answers could greatly effect the health of our nation and eventually tens of billions of dollars of our agricultural economy (beef, poultry and dairy industries, to name a few). Dean is not only a "physician's physician"; he is incredibly articulate and has the firm moral fiber necessary to withstand the challenges he faces from entrenched interests threatened by his new findings. I know that you are well acquainted with Dean, and trust that he will not be lost among more "traditional" candidates for this super-important job.

Andy Grove for Secretary of Defense

Andy is at the center of the exploding information revolution, and he could bring many of these perspectives to defense strategy and its current uses of information technology (command & control, intelligence, ...). He could be a secret weapon to change our perspectives and thinking about defense as our nation faces new world roles and fiscal limitations. I have never met a better manager and leader in my life (including Dave Packard and Bob Noyce). Andy has no public policy experience, but he is one of the smartest and fastest learners I have ever met. He was born in Hungary and is a US citizen.

Please excuse my presumption in making these suggestions; I just wanted to make sure that these folks didn't escape your attention as you make these critical decisions.

All the best to you and your family,

Steve Jobs

Dear Steve:

It was a pleasure to see you when you came to visit the White House, as well as during my trip to Los Angeles. Thank you for joining us at David Geffen's house that evening. I've enjoyed having the chance to talk with you.

Your support of the Democratic National Committee and of my Administration has been critical to our efforts and will be increasingly important in the coming months. Thank you for being there when you were asked to help.

I deeply appreciate your involvement, and hope you will continue to share your advice and insight.

Hillary joins me in sending warmest regards. I hope to see you again soon.

Sincerely,

Dear President and Mrs. Clinton,

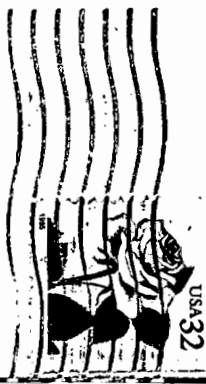

May 10, 1996

Thank you for a visit we will remember all our lives. We loved the evening, especially staying up chatting with the President. We had a great time exploring the house and grounds, and had the good fortune of stumbling upon Rex along the way.

We now have a glimmer of your perspective looking out from the White House, as everyone else tries to look in. Thanks for sharing a little piece of your world with us.
Warmest Regards,

CUPERTINO, Calif., Dec. 20—Steve Jobs is coming home. More than a decade after the legendary entrepreneur was bitterly ousted from Apple Computer Inc., which he co-founded, he has been invited back to help spark a turnaround at the now-troubled company.

Jobs and Apple Chief Executive Gilbert F. Amelio made the announcement tonight before 250 cheering employees at Apple's headquarters. "I'm very excited," a beaming Jobs said. "I'm looking forward to get to re-know some old colleagues."

Apple also said it will acquire Next Software Inc., the company Jobs founded after he left Apple, for $400 million. The purchase is part of an effort to develop a new basic software for Apple's Macintosh computer, a project considered crucial to Apple's survival.

Jobs, who started Apple in a garage in 1976—helping turn the personal computer from novelty item into a multibillion-dollar global seller—will be a part-time consultant and adviser to Amelio. He will help oversee development of the new operating system, software that controls the most basic functions of a computer.

"This is a very complimentary arrangement," Amelio told the news conference. "The pieces fit better together."

Amelio compared the Next acquisition to the watershed release of Apple's original Macintosh computer in 1984, a project that Jobs oversaw. Amelio predicted that the purchase "will launch a new round of innovation in the industry."

Apple once was the trendsetter of the industry. But its market share has slipped badly in recent years as machines that run Microsoft Corp.'s Windows operating system have come to dominate the industry. Apple executives said tonight they believe Next's operating software will halt their slide and help chip away at Microsoft's lead.

The move is a dramatic return for Jobs, who as a brash young multimillionaire was forced out of Apple in 1985 after losing a power struggle with then-Chief Executive John Sculley. The ouster was all the more dramatic because Jobs had brought Sculley in to guide the company to maturity.

Jobs said Next had been discussing becoming a publicly traded company when discussion with Apple began, spurred partially by a telephone call from a young Next marketing employee to an Apple executive to see if Apple was interested in Next software.

"This just looked like a much better place for us to be with this technology," Jobs said.

Next began as a manufacturer of computer workstations and software. Dismal sales led Jobs to pull Next out of the hardware business in 1993 to focus on a novel software programming technology called "object-oriented" computing, which allows key components of a software program to be used interchangeably with other programs.

Apple is eager to embrace that technology in its Macintosh operating system. Earlier this year, Apple had scrapped its own development efforts on a new operating system.

"When he went to start Next, in his view he was going to create the next great computer with both hardware and software," Tim Bajarin, president of Computer Strategies Research International in San Jose told the Associated Press. "You could now argue he is putting his system back into the Apple world and in essence creating the next great [operating system]."

In the competition to provide the next Apple operating system, Next beat out Sun Microsystems Inc. and Be Inc., a company founded by former Apple technology officer Jean-Louis Gasse.

Industry analysts have been pessimistic about Apple's future for the past two years, as personal computers using Microsoft software and Intel Corp.'s processors have come to dominate the business and consumer markets.

Apple's army of loyalists have bristled at Microsoft's successful incorporation of features long associated with the Macintosh, such as an easy-to-use interface that employs graphic "icons" rather than text commands to carry out tasks.

Apple's share of the home and office computer market has shrunk to the single digits, though it remains strong in the educational and graphics markets. It returned to profitability this year after three straight quarterly losses, due largely to a major restructuring, employee layoffs and a management overhaul in the past year.

Jobs's return to Apple was hailed by some industry analysts today.

"He's returning as an older, wiser and much wiler Steve than he was when John Sculley kicked him out," said Paul Saffo, director of the Institute for the Future in Menlo Park, Calif. One month ago, Saffo jokingly proposed a "draft Jobs to Apple" movement in Silicon Valley.

Dear Steve:

I was very pleased to learn about Apple Computer's generous donation to the people of Kosovo. The 27 iMacs you provided will help equip seven Internet sites, fostering enormous opportunities for growth and development in the province.

Our country's greatest strength is the community spirit of its people, and your dedication to caring for others is an important part of that tradition. By helping the people of Kosovo rebuild their lives, you are setting a powerful example of compassion and service for businesses across America. I thank you and your colleagues for your staunch commitment to improving our world and send my best regards.

Sincerely,

On the President's recent trip to Sarajevo, Apple donated 10 imacs, a G-3 server and teaching monitor for the President to present to the grade school he was visiting. I would like to request a thank you letter from the President to Steve Jobs, interim-CEO of Apple computers recognizing the company's contributions. I could provide any additional information that is needed. The letter should be addressed to:

Steve Jobs

- New Markets: On August 19, SBA will hold a joint partnership signing ceremony at the National Council for Negro Women headquarters in Washington, DC. The partnership agreement is designed to increase participation of African-American-owned small businesses in SBA's capital-access, procurement, international trade, advocacy, welfare-to-work and women-owned business programs.

OFFICE OF PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT

- Welfare-to-Work: On August 2, Vice-President Gore released a report on Federal Welfare-to-Work hires, demonstrating that the Federal Government has eclipsed its commitment to hire 10,000 former welfare recipients by more than 4,000 hires. Data prepared by OPM also demonstrated that Welfare-to-Work employees were nearly twice as likely to be retained as other workers at similar grade levels.
- Organ Donors: On August 3, the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee favorably reported the following bills that OPM developed: the Federal Erroneous Retirement Coverage Corrections Act, which would allow for the correction of instances where Federal agencies enrolled Federal workers in the wrong retirement system, and two versions of the Organ Donor Leave Act which would grant up to 30 days leave for Federal workers who serve as organ donors.
- Federal Agency Employment Reduction Assistance Act: On August 2, OPM sent to Congress a legislative proposal entitled the "Federal Agency Employment Reduction Assistance Act of 1999" which would authorize Federal agencies to offer 'buyouts' of up to $25,000 when their use would assist in downsizing and streamlining operations.

UNITED STATES INFORMATION AGENCY

- Refugee Internet Initiative: With the return home of the Kosovar refugees, USIA will soon close its Internet center in the German refugee camp, followed by those in France and Poland. The equipment and supplies from these facilities will be sent to Kosovo, to set up seven Internet sites in the province. An additional 27 iMacs donated by Apple will be headed to Kosovo to supplement these resources.

GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION

✓ TX Computer Donation: Recently GSA Region 7 presented the Cuero, TX Independent School District with 20 computers and 3 servers and carpet worth more than $6,000. Cuero, TX which was devastated by heavy flooding in May 1998, is still recovering from damage to the city, the surrounding neighborhoods, and the schools. The carpet, which had been scheduled for installation in the Murrah Building prior to the explosion in 1995, had remained in storage since that date and was slated to be destroyed.
